

"The knowledge of the world is only to be gained in the world, not in the closet. Books alone will never teach it to you; but they will help suggest many things to your observation which might otherwise escape you."

Lord Chesterfield
From a letter to his son